Raspberry Pi Sense HAT

The Raspberry Pi Sense HAT features pressure, humidity, temperature and orientation sensors combined with an 8x8 neopixel LED matrix and a small joystick. Attach the HAT to your Pi's GPIO pins and you can use the sensors for many different types of experiments, applications, and even games.

The sensors enable you to read:
Orientation (yaw, pitch & roll) via an accelerometer, 3D gyroscope and magnetometer
Pressure, Humidity and Temperature

The Sense HAT supports a whole host of projects for the Raspberry Pi, it can measure how fast and in which direction the Pi is travelling as well as collecting environmental data; air humidity, pressure and temperature. The LED Matrix then enables you to display the data from the various sensors or can be used to play games like Tetris or Snake with the joystick.

MATLAB & Simulink Raspberry Pi Development Kit - Student Edition

element14

MATLAB® Support Package for Raspberry Pi Hardware, you can access peripheral devices through the Raspberry Pi. This support allows you to acquire data from sensors and imaging devices connected to the Raspberry Pi. Specifically, a library of MATLAB functions are provided for the following Raspberry Pi add-ons and interfaces:

- Raspberry Pi Camera Board
- I2C interface
- SPI interface
- Serial interface
- GPIO

Includes: Mathworks MatLab & Simulink Student Version License Key, Raspberry Pi 2 Model B, 8GB NOOBs MicroSD, UK/EU PSU 2A, Black Pi Case

Students can use MATLAB to acquire data from connected devices, and then they can analyse and visualize their data in MATLAB.

When connected to MATLAB and Simulink products, Raspberry Pi can help students and hobbyists understand concepts and workflows for designing an embedded system, without using hand programming. You start by using Simulink to create algorithms for audio processing, computer vision, and robotics applications. Then you can apply industry-proven techniques for Model-Based Design to verify that your algorithms work during simulation. Finally, you implement the algorithms as standalone applications on a Raspberry Pi.

Note: Available on 32-bit and 64-bit Microsoft® Windows® and 64-bit Mac OS X

External PIR Light Controller

An adjustable angle 180° motion sensor with the ability to switch lighting loads up to 1kW @ 240Vac. The unit utilises a passive infra red detector that senses body heat movement and can switch on the load accordingly, turning it off after an adjustable length of time. The units IP44 rating makes it suitable for outdoor use and as such is ideal for use with a security/courtesy light. An internal photocell switches the unit off during daylight to save energy and unwanted daytime usage. Supplied with installation instructions and fixing screws. TUV approved.
